

Market commentary: The VN-INDEX gained 0.8% with support mostly from Financials large caps

The VN-INDEX closed up 0.8% at 854.8pts, the peak in around a week, as investor's appetite in blue chips and large cap stocks gave stimulus to the upward momentum. Right after the opening bell, the session started cautiously, but the market soon embarked on a rising momentum, fuelled by strong buying from investors who were seeking Financials stocks such as BID (+1.8%), CTG (+4.3%), VPB (+2.6%) and TPB (+2.8%). Other large caps joined the rally to lift the index higher, led by VIC (+0.1%), VNM (+0.3%), MSN (+1.2%), HPG (+1.0%) and GAS (+1.4%). On the opposite side, VCB and VHM lost the ground, dipping 0.1% and 0.6%, respectively. As a result, the VN-INDEX climbed up to 854.8pts, the highest since its 13 Aug close of 855.1pts, and the HNX-INDEX rose 1.2% to close at 122.6pts.

Most sectors rose today, led by Materials (+1.7%), Financials (+1.4%), and Health Care (+1.4%) while Real Estate stood unchanged. Oil extends decline below US$43 with demand headwinds mounting

Oil fell as the coronavirus pandemic continues to cloud the demand outlook. Europe's economy unexpectedly lost momentum this month, causing concerns over energy consumption and showcasing the challenge to growth. The region is battling to control a new spike in virus cases while trying to avoid renewed lockdowns. Since prices touched a five-month high at the start of this month, U.S. crude futures have barely moved, trading in a US$2.50 range. This week the Federal Reserve and OPEC+ cast doubt on the outlook for the global economy and oil demand respectively. Still, prices are set to eke out a gain for the week after data earlier showed American crude and gasoline stockpiles shrank. Prices are being kept in check by rising production, particularly from OPEC+ and Canada, "and the demand recovery slowing down markedly," said Helge Andre Martinsen, analyst at DNB Bank ASA. Ministry to halt Vietnam's market trading in emergency cases

If serious turbulence is caused by large-scale sell-offs and considered a threat to the security of the equity market, the Ministry of Finance will have to switch the market off. In a written response to the Vietnam Financial Advisory Association, the Ministry of Finance said amid the prolonged COVID-19 pandemic and rising tensions between the world's largest economies, global stock markets were becoming more vulnerable and sensitive to bad news. "Using technical solutions to intervene in the stock market did not help prevent the market's decline and also affects the confidence of investors, therefore under normal circumstances, the government should not intervene in stock trading to ensure the market's smooth operation and transparency," the ministry said. However, in emergencies, if the market falls too much in a trading day due to unexpected negative news impacting overall sentiment, the ministry would have to halt stock trading to calm the market down. According to the finance ministry, market turbulence caused by large-scale sell-offs is considered a threat to the security of the equity market. The reasons for such a sell-off may come from bad news from international markets, the dissolution or insolvency of a company, or changes of regulations. Aside from halting the market, the finance ministry would also ask stock exchanges to adjust the trading time and change the daily trading limit of stock prices to prevent the market from plunging. Stock price adjustments have been applied in volatile periods of the stock market, most recently in the financial crisis in 2008. This acted as an "emergency" solution, helping stop the downtrend of the market. But its effectiveness did not prolong so it was just a short-term solution, the ministry said. The ministry also said halting trading was an extreme solution, only applied in very special cases. For example, the ministry had to shut down the Ho Chi Minh City Stock Exchange (HoSE) on January 23-24, 2018 due to a technical problem with its system.

Extend fee cut regulation

The finance ministry will also extend the validity for the fee exemption regulation until June next year, scheduled to be applied from March to August 31 this year. Under Circular 14/2020/TT-BTC issued on March 18, the ministry announced it would cut the fees of nine securities services and exempt fees for six others from March 19 as part of efforts to support the stock market amid the negative impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. The cut and exemption will now be extended till June 30 next year. (Vietnamnet.vn)
