Market News

Oil hampered by new virus cases while American stockpiles swell

Oil traded below US$41 a barrel in New York as coronavirus cases continued to surge across the world and U.S. crude stockpiles grew. Nationwide inventories rose last week, with supplies at the key storage hub of Cushing expanding for the first time since early May, according to government data. Meanwhile, California and Texas recorded some of their biggest daily increases in virus cases and deaths, Australia's second-largest city went into lockdown and Iran reported its deadliest day yet. Oil has rebounded from a plunge below zero in April as record output cuts from OPEC+ help rebalance the market. But some are predicting a long recovery from the pandemic, with Standard Chartered Plc estimating oil consumption next year at 2017 levels, meaning the virus would have destroyed the intervening years of growth. Though the global Brent benchmark has more than doubled from its lows, prices have struggled to make further gains. (Bloomberg)

Vietnam activates new wave of reform to lure foreign investors

In recent months, there has been much information about the departure of foreign investors from China in the movement to restructure global supply chains. These investors are expected to head for India and Southeast Asian countries, including Vietnam. India, Vietnam and Southeast Asian countries have run a race to lure investment. According to Can Van Luc, chief economist of BIDV, the governments in the region are using five instruments to attract investors, including tax, land access, business environment improvement, training to produce skilled workers and barriers to prevent takeovers in some business fields. In Vietnam, Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc has established a taskforce in charge of promoting foreign investment. However, experts believe that tax and land incentives are not enough to lure investors. They stressed that administrative reform, business environment improvement and the heightening of the nation's competitiveness are also important factors in the eyes of investors. Chair of the Vietnam Chamber of Commerce and Industry (VCCI) Vu Tien Loc believes that improvement of administrative procedures and the business environment is especially important for Vietnam to grab the great opportunity from the new FDI wave. Two important reform campaigns have been carried out since the beginning of the government term. In 2016, ministries eliminated a lot of business conditions believed to hinder the development of enterprises. In 2018, Vietnam carried out the second reform when the government commanded ministries to cut 50 percent more administrative procedures and sub-licenses. Loc said that this is the right time for the third reform campaign to turn Vietnam into an attractive destination for foreign investors. (Vietnamnet.vn)
